An ascetic K. lived near a village where many rivers met.
He made a vow always to speak the truth, and became celebrated as a speaker of truth. From fear of robbers, certain persons entered that wood. The robbers came and asked K. by which path the men had gone, and he told them the truth; the robbers finding out the persons slew them all.
K. fell into a grievous hell: VIII, 69, 3439, 3446, 3448,
